

Black communities are facing a healthcare crisis. As of right now, 10 states have refused to expand Medicaid eligibility, affecting over two million Americans. States are largely concentrated in the South and include Alabama, Florida, Georgia, Kansas, Mississippi, South Carolina, Tennessee, Texas, Wisconsin and Wyoming.

Black Voters Matter is re-launching the Sick and Tired Campaign to raise awareness around the current cost of healthcare and lack of access in our communities.

Access to healthcare is a fundamental right. Data shows that Medicaid expansion improves access to preventive care and even has positive economic effects, such as creating jobs and reducing uncompensated care costs. The toolkit material below will help amplify this important message and give your networks an opportunity to join in to make a difference for Black communities in need of affordable health care.

Email for partner orgs:

Hello,

We are excited to announce that we have officially re-launched our Sick and Tired campaign. Our campaign aims to raise awareness of the urgent need to expand Medicaid coverage in Black communities. As of right now, 10 states have refused to expand Medicaid eligibility, affecting over two million Americans. States are largely concentrated in the South and include Alabama, Florida, Georgia, Kansas, Mississippi, South Carolina, Tennessee, Texas, Wisconsin and Wyoming.

We have created a social media toolkit to educate about the important impact that Medicaid expansion has on our communities. This toolkit contains ready-to-post social media captions and graphics to equip community members with the resources they need to become digital advocates for this important issue.

We hope you'll join us in amplifying social media content and resources to get more people involved in the Sick and Tired campaign. We encourage you to share the sample messages below with your networks.

Thank you for all of your support and dedication to supporting our work to achieve equity in our communities. Let us know if you have any questions!

Best,

[Name]

Lingering disparities in our healthcare system disproportionately impact Black voters. Data shows that Black women are three times more likely to die from a pregnancy-related cause than White women, and Black people visit emergency rooms for mental health issues at nearly twice the national average.

Black communities deserve access to widespread affordable healthcare, and the data shows that Medicaid expansion is a key pathway to ensuring a more equitable health care system. Access to affordable and equitable health care is a human right, not a luxury. I'm taking action with @Black Voters Matter Sick and Tired campaign because I'm standing up for Medicaid expansion in Black communities.

Investing in Medicaid is a vital step towards addressing the existing health disparities that put our loved ones at increased risk of medical emergencies, maternal mortality, local hospital closures and a lack of access to essential health services.

I'm pledging to be an advocate for Black health care, because we deserve to thrive and live healthy and fulfilling lives. La In Alabama, Florida, Georgia, Idaho, Kansas, Mississippi, Missouri, North Carolina, South Carolina, South Dakota, Tennessee, and Wyoming, lawmakers still haven't taken much-needed action to expand Medicaid.

@Black Voters Matter is launching the Sick and Tired campaign to bring awareness to the critical need for equitable and affordable healthcare in economically disadvantaged Black neighborhoods.

I'm taking action with them because access to healthcare is a human right, and we need more advocates who are willing to protect and stand up for our communities . We need more advocates who are willing to protect and stand up for Black communities. Racism is a public health crisis, and we see it everywhere from disproportionate maternal mortality rates to high percentages of mental health visits and intergenerationally transmitted stressors that have been exacerbated by the COVID-19 pandemic. Too many of our loved ones are living without access to affordable health care - join the movement with @blackvotersmtr to champion healthcare access.
